Work With the Future of Russia

Every summer thousands of children head off for camps across Russia, from the shores of Lake Baikal to the beaches of the Black Sea. Each camp has its own philosophy, but all provide children a place to relax while having fun in an outdoor setting.

In many ways, these camps resemble those in the United States and Canada as they are usually located in a rural setting, often by a lake or river, away from the nearest town and typically, with a large dining hall, crafts, sports buildings and dormitories. Children usually come for sessions lasting 10 to 28 days and participate in activities such as swimming, boating, canoeing, theatre, land sports, arts, crafts, dance, and performing arts.

Your Role as a Camp Counselor

As a leader, role model, friend, instructor, big brother or sister, cheerleader and hero to campers ages 7 - 16, your primary responsibility is overall supervision. You are there to ensure their well-being and safety, and to make their camp experience more fun and rewarding. As a Counselor, you will be with campers 24 hours a day. Counselors make sure the campers eat meals, attend and participate in day and evening activities, clean cabins, and even get to sleep at night.

During the day

Most Russian camps place their most important emphasis on the children having fun, and getting exercise and stimulation during the daytime – and your primary role is to facilitate this. Your exact position and duties at camp will depend largely upon the level of your Russian speaking ability. It is NOT essential that you speak Russian to participate in the programme, however if you are able to speak some of the language you will find that the daily opportunities for integrating into camp life are greater. You may well help with the planning and leading of day-to-day activities, whether they are sports, arts or water based. For those with little or no Russian language ability – your role will be more of an assisting role, and where you might help with specific sports or activities, depending on your own level of experience and expertise. You will not be in sole control of leading these if you do not have the appropriate language expertise e. There are some camps which offer language programmes to their campers; you may be asked to help with lessons and with encouraging the children to practice their English language conversational abilities. The most important thing to remember is that life at a Russian camp is fun – and that ensuring the Campers make the most of their day is your main goal.

Accommodation

Each camp is different; however, most counselors will be living in a cabin, platform tent or dormitory style accommodation with a co-counselor and 8 to 10 campers of similar age. Sometimes cabins have their own bathroom, but it is also common for several cabins to share a large centralized bath and shower facility. Accommodation is separated by gender and usually by age, so that similar age groups are kept together.

Food

Be prepared for some of the most delicious food you'll ever taste, but don't expect it to taste like home. The Russian camp diet is varied and plentiful, however – culturally they have little experience of vegetarian or other special diets. If you follow this choice of eating be prepared for repetitive meals. Staff and campers eat together, often in a dining hall or other allocated room. Food is generally served either "family style" – with platters of meat, fish, vegetables and bread brought to the table or Canteen style – where everyone helps themselves from a serving hatch. Camps always provide 3 meals a day for their staff and campers, and snacks are available between meals.

A Typical Day

Though camp is definitely a lot of fun, it's not a holiday for staff. Except for your time off, you'll spend 24 hours a day with an active group of children. Total working hours may be more than a typical day's work at most other jobs. You must adapt to the lack of privacy and to the basic level of accommodation. You will be expected to follow strict camp rules for campers and staff: no smoking, no drinking of alcoholic beverages and a nightly curfew. All in all, the joy of summer camp more than offsets the hard work. A cheerful, hardworking attitude is a must!

Here's an example of a typical day as a camp counselor at a Russian Summer Camp.

- 7:30 Reveille (Wake up, get dressed, maybe a swim)
- 8:00 Morning Exercises
- 8:30 Shower and clean room
- 9:00 Traditional practices (flag raising, breakfast)

- 17:00 Swimming, group activities
- 19:00 Dinner
- 19:30 Evening activity (disco, films, concert, dancing)
